Stella McCartney has launched a new capsule collection celebrating the legendary British band, The Beatles, and an upcoming documentary under the same name.

The capsule features a regenerated nylon bomber inspired by Paul McCartney’s own wardrobe, galaxy wash organic cotton denim, a patchwork cardigan coat, knit tracksuits and accessories, as well as t-shirts, jumpers and hoodies plus a vibrant version of the Reclypse unisex trainer, Stella’s most sustainable vegan sneaker to date.

The capsule launched with an event on Thursday night at the Henson Recording Studios in Los Angeles on 18 November, which will be visually and energetically replicated globally through immersive in-store experiences that blend fashion and music. Pieces are priced between £70 and £1,795, and are now exclusively available at stellamccartney.com, in Stella McCartney stores and on Net-a-Porter.

“Get Back is about so much more than just a song or a concert – it is the timeless story of lifelong friends coming together to create something incredible with laughter and utter fearlessness whilst standing at the forefront of change. The Beatles were the faces of a cultural movement for positive change that continues to shape the lives of millions around the world, and I hope this capsule celebrates and communicates these ageless messages to a new generation,” said Stella, in a news statement.

The documentary, directed by three-time Oscar-winning filmmaker Peter Jackson, ‘The Beatles: Get Back’ follows John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Star as they plan their first live show in over two years.
