The British Fashion Council (BFC) has released the provisional schedule for London Fashion Week (LFW) that takes place from 16-20 September.

Once again, it will be a hybrid digital-physical schedule and it will feature over 110 confirmed designers, including big hitters such as Burberry, which returns to London after a short hiatus and Raf Simons. The latter will be making his LFW catwalk debut.
Further highlights will include collections from established labels that are big attractions at LFW, such as Emilia Wickstead, Erdem, JW Anderson, Huishan Zhang, Molly Goddard, Rejina Pyo, Roksanda and Simone Rocha.

This year’s BFC/Vogue Designer Fashion Fund winner Richard Quinn will also be back on the schedule along with some other names representing fashion’s future, like BFC Fashion Trust recipients Completedworks, Richard Malone, Supriya Lele and Tove.

Other brands taking part this season will be 16Arlington, Chopova Lowena, Daniel W Fletcher, Edward Crutchley, Fashion East, Halpern and Knwls.

The BFC Newgen Show Space will also return to The Old Selfridges Hotel with the support of the luxury department store retailer. Taking part there will be Ancuta Sarca, Asai, Bethany Williams, Chet Lo, Di Petsa, Efychia, Feben, Harri, Helen Kirkum, Leo Carlton, Masha Popova, Nensi Dojaka, Paolo Carzana, SS Daley, Sinéad O’Dwyer, Stefan Cooke and Yuhan Wang.

And the digital hub for LFW will continue to be accessible to everyone.

As mentioned, the schedule is only provisional for now with the final dates and formats for each label to be confirmed in the middle of next month.
